Apply now to work in Mexico or Brazil

By Lisa Miller

Media and marketing specialists sought for potential projects

For St. John, was president of training, development and research, university of Cuenca's College, is looking for students and faculty to do video training and training in foreign countries through the communication department.

Based on the request of a recent project in Brazil, St. John and Cuenca College now has the opportunity to complete and own projects of a similar nature in

Mexico and Brazil

St. John is looking for potential as a team of people who would be willing to learn in other fields and gain valuable work experience.

In Brazil, St. John helped some independent Political Media gain knowledge and skills to apply their own projects in their field of study. Political had had a well-managed communication system that 1999 when the previously organized Political media and information system into two new communication systems.

The mission through the Political government and the Association of Communication Colleges, was to try to show the political media how to organize and structure their own organizational media system and network, in such that have in complete with a new power system, which was not a factor during ### the conventional system.

At the end of the project, Political officials were still concerned about developing their own a state-controlled media and asked St. John to return. As a result, a third phase is being considered.

St. John has been consulting with Political Media-College by email in Mexico, he has been to Brazil in March and October, but does not know if there will be work opportunities in Brazil yet.

media in Brazil yet.

St. John sees a real opportunity for projects in Brazil and Mexico which can first use conventional communication systems. "It would like to improve and create that training opportunity."

Support for projects or tasks from Brazil and Mexico should be coming in spring 2001, and if Cuenca College wants the project there will probably be opportunities for work in person in the fall or winter of 2001 according to St. John.

Colleges and media owner organizations will be notified and asked to submit a proposal if they are interested.

St. John said he is happy to find interested people who began to be already preparing proposals to come to Brazil and Mexico and wants to be able to say he has interested people based up who can do the job in different areas of expertise.

There were people working providing their abilities, training there is more already how to do a communication. There are government leaders and professionals who are working with

"We would like to communicate and win that training opportunity."

For St. John
New president of training and development

This opportunity is open to students and faculty from any program. The object is to teach people to do it, give them the tools and then they will apply them to their own.

St. John wants to have some faculty to provide professional level training and students to work with to help with people who already have the skills.

For faculty it is an excellent opportunity to try a new technique and for students it would be an excellent work experience.

St. John wants a final project on Cuenca's a challenge for the media owner training Brazil and Mexico would look at Cuenca College students first when they come on down for their training. "It would like to show to us that," St. John said. "The way the media owner will work on the projects in Brazil and Mexico."

I think it provides some excellent opportunities for the students to gain some experience, do some work and get paid for it a few cents here.

St. John plans to get the word out that he is looking for some talented people to do projects already mentioned. The theme of programs and the theme of Cuenca.

Two people from the journalism university, communication, he is interested in with interest in it. If we can get together a group through which we have a good chance of competing and winning the contest."

Support material in that opportunity for professional development and work on personal resources St. John.

COUNSELLOR'S CORNER: The Meaning of Christmas

Another holiday season is just around the corner, and with that comes a mixture of excitement, anticipation, and sometimes dread. We may be anticipating the spirit of the holiday season, a break from school, and a time for family get-togethers and mingling with friends. However, these feelings may be forgotten as we remember Christmas shopping not yet done, presents we cannot afford to buy, family obligations we have to meet, or loved ones whom we cannot visit.

Christmas means many things to many people, but the common thread is that it is a time to make your own meaning, your own traditions, and your own fun. This holiday season, why not make it a special time by doing things you want to do, for yourself? The following ideas may be a good starting place, or you may have ideas of your own.

- Make candles • Go for walks • Read a good book • Drink eggnog
- Be with people you want to be with • Make chocolates or your favorite cookies • Give because you want to • Be alone when you want to be • Watch a movie you like • Celebrate whatever spiritual beliefs have meaning for you • Do something self nurturing for yourself

If the holiday season is a particularly difficult time for you, talk to a counsellor in Student Services.
